R. B. STALL HIGH SCHOOL

NORTH CHARLESTON— The Jefferson Awards Students in Action Program for RB Stall High School continues to have a huge impact on students in the school and on the greater community. Recently, Stall completed second quarter awards to students for outstanding service. These students were nominated by classmates and faculty alike for making a difference.

The January 2010 Winner was Akeem Young. Akeem has worked diligently to encourage fellow students and others at Stall to participate to two Red Cross blood drives. Akeem also has worked tirelessly as a member of the Student Government Association and the Jefferson Award Leadership team to help motivate the Stall community through such projects as Help Haiti, Pennies for Patients and Jeans for Jefferson.

In February, Ashley McFadden was chosen the Students in Action service award for her contributions to the school community. Ashley spends many hours in and out of school preparing information for the Stall student body and assisting with many projects that help make a difference at school. She has worked as a leader in student government and as a role model in her classes.

Our March 2010 recipient is Alisha Ackerman. Alisha spends time each month researching notable events at Stall High School. She then writes stories about various events and people who are making a difference and submits her articles to the Post and Courier for publication. Alisha contributes to the greater community by taking the time to share her talent and great news about the Stall family.
